WHOLE NO. 2015

THE BOBBS MERRILL CO.

I. A. R. Wyllie, the author of "The Native Born," has written a novel big in plan, picturesquely imaginative, throbbing with emotion, and with three or four really masterly scenes.

The pomp and mysticism of Hindu worship

The personal veneration attaching to the Rajah

The gay butterfly existence of the women of the English station, and the wasting, ennuied life of the men

The labyrinthine palaces
The ruby-eyed gods
The deserted bungalows
The bordering jungle
The sonorous names
The stories of former uprisings

—all of these properties are used with impressive effect. In conception the plot is original and strong. For the superb portrait of the young Rajah, serene and majestic in his robes of white; for Adam Nicholson, the ideal Englishman for India, since he is wise enough and generous enough to respect those whom he governs; for the transformation in the character of Beatrice from a cold adventuress to a noble woman; for gentle, loving Lois; for the force and vividness with which the native uprising, led by the undeceived Rajah is painted; for the beautiful scene of renunciation between Nicholson and Lois—for all of these things the reader is deeply in the author's debt.—Publishers' Weekly.

AROLD MacGRATH is a millionaire of romance. His capital of make-believe seems unlimited. And he uses his golden means to build libraries—just like a practical Carnegie millionaire. He is, indeed, a public benefactor. He writes to entertain, and he never falls below the level. His books delight, amuse and give pleasure. That's no small object for the fiction writer to attain. After all, it's his first business to be interesting.

The foregoing is the remarkable record of

MISS MINERVA and WILLIAM GREEN HILL

By FRANCES BOYD CALHOUN

The record shows that the book sells. We would have, say, 2000 books on hand on the first of the month: would figure they would "carry us" for thirty days—as we had just filled orders for a large number—and would order a printing accordingly. In two or three weeks we would find ourselves "out" of "Miss Minerva." We would hurry the printer and the binder, get stock, and see constant orders "eat it up" with marvelous rapidity.

Dealers would start with half a dozen copies: would "repeat": then order 25: then 50: then 100. We honestly believe that each copy of "Miss Minerva" bought of a retailer causes the sale of at least one other copy. It is constantly being recommended by those who read it.

If you have never had "Miss Minerva" in stock you are missing something good. Try it and watch the sales grow.

There are 26 chapters of jollity. There are more than 20 pictures to laugh at. There are 212 pages to scream over. Size of book,  $4\% \times 7$  inches. Bound in cloth. Price \$1.00.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Foreman of the Special Grand Jury on the White Slave Traffic, writes:—

"I have read 'The House of Bondage' with much interest. The story is inexpressibly sad, but sadder still is the knowledge that it is true to life—true not only in the exceptional case but in hundreds and doubtless thousands of cases.

"The author has handled a difficult subject with the utmost delicacy consistent with perfect frankness. While telling his story fearlessly he does so without sensationalism.

"I believe that the conditions with which the book deals must be generally known before they will be improved and that the publicity thus given them will be of great value."

Deep in Piney Woods

By J. W. CHURCH

12mo, cloth; 354 pages, 4 illustrations by M. Power O'Malley. $1.20 net; postage, 15 cents

The new Southern writer who makes his appearance in this romance has discovered a field hitherto neglected by his fellow-craftsmen. The piney woods of South Georgia comprise a great tract of forest country, where the chief industry is the extraction and distillation of turpentine. The hero is of the modest but muscular type, a graduate of a New York technical school, and an expert in his profession, who is called South to take charge of a turpentine plantation. His experiences in his new surroundings form a fascinating story.

A Reader's Opinion

"One of the most readable and enjoyable books that I have seen in many months. It deals with a subject which is particularly interesting to Southern people—a love story of great charm and grace."

NOTES IN SEASON.

Bobbes-Merrill Company report continued large sales of Henry Russell Miller's "The Man Higher Up," the story of a tenement waif who rose to the governorship of a great State.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY publish this week a new story by Norman Duncan entitled "Billy Topsail and Company," which is the continuation of the adventures of Billy Topsail of fragrant memory to boys who love adventure. Also a collection of stories by Dr. Grenfell, entitled "Down to the Sea," full of the grim adventures of the Labrador Coast. The latter is illustrated with pictures from the doctor's own camera.

"The Man and the Dragon" is the title of a new September novel from the pen of Alexander Otis, whose first book, "Hearts Are Trumps," was one of the fictional successes of 1909. "The Man and the Dragon" depicts the struggle of the young editor of the Carthage News against a political boss on the one hand, and a ring of traction magnates on the other. Through the plot there runs a charming love story. Little, Brown & Co. will publish Mr. Otis' novel.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have been obliged to postpone the publication of Myrtle Reed's "Master of the Vineyard" to September 15, owing to the exceptionally heavy advance orders. On September 28 they will publish "The Mistress of Shenstone," by the author of "The Rosary." Although a story complete in itself, the new story again lets us meet Myra (the mistress of Shenstone), Jane and other old friends.

In connection with the great National Conservation Congress, held this week at St. Paul, Doubleday, Page & Company call the attention of the trade to the timely publication on September 8 of "The Fight for Conservation," by Gifford Pinchot. That the book is authoritative the author's name alone will insure; that it gives in the briefest compass a complete survey of the whole subject as it exists to-day in the United States will be seen by an examination of this vitally important little volume.

On September 16 Dodd, Mead & Company will publish George Barr McCutcheon's new novel, "The Rose in the Ring," a circus story and quite up to Mr. McCutcheon's best—"nuff said;" "The Open Door," a mystery story whose scenes are laid in San Francisco, by Earle Ashley Walcott, the author of "Blindfolded;" Russell Sturgis's "Artist's Way of Working in the Various Handicrafts and Arts of Design," a new popular edition of a former $15 work; and Jane Barlow's well-known "Irish Idylls," illustrated by photographs by Clifton Johnson, who knows perhaps better than any other to seize with his camera the spirit of a countryside.

The publication date of "Forbidden Ground," by Gilbert Watson, which is to be published this fall by John Lane Company, has been deferred to September 9, owing to the numerous advance orders. This story is attracting considerable attention from those who care for good literature, and it will be found that Mr. Watson, like W. J. Locke, can write real literature and at the same time appeal to the average novel reader. The scene of "Forbidden Ground" is in Albania, a country little known to most readers of fiction. The action occurs chiefly in the monastery of Barlaam, which is the scene of many stirring experiences. The novel is a distinct departure from Mr. Watson's other books.

Chambers, Rob. W: Ailsa Paige; a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1910. c. 502 p. pls. D. cl., $1.50.

Cl., $1.50.

The story concerns itself chiefly with three characters, Ailsa Paige, a very young widow living quietly in New York; a young man known as Philip Berkeley; and Colonel Arran, a member of an old and distinguished New York family. Berkely one day discovers from some old letters that not only the good name of his mother is under a shadow, but that his own birthright is in doubt. Stunned and heartbroken, he enters upon a life of lawlessness that almost reduces him to a state of degeneration. It is his uplift from this animal state to a high plane of human development, brought about largely by the devotion of Ailsa Paige and the incidents of the war, that furnishes the theme of the story. The period of the story is the first year of the Civil War, the scenes of its setting are New York, the Army of the Potomac camp outside Washington, and the Seven Days' Battle.

The union of psychic and organic in describing the state as a "functional system within the social organism" is the basic theory of this book. The attitude toward the state of such philosophical writers as Hegel, Schelling, Krause, Ahrens, Waitz, Rohmer, Volgraff, Stahl, Stein, Comte, Spencer, Worman, etc., is set forth, with the heart of their theories on this special subject. The author is instructor in politics at Princeton University; sometime Fellow of Political Philosophy of Columbia University. Bibliography (5 p.).

ments. N. Y., Longmans, Green, 1910. 10+7-230 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.

From a strongly Catholic attitude, by his bent of mind and independence of logic, the writer was led into what is now called "Modernism." It was a conflict "against Roman monoclistic claims" and led into what is now called "Modernism." It was a conflict "against Roman monopolistic claims," and the general process may be summed up in the author's own words: "I was faced with a choice of either walking blindfold toward disaster, with an unquestioning and implicit faith and obedience that drew body and soul to the verge of the abyss, or else of discovering such an individual manner of understanding the divine truths of revelation, salvation and atonement, that these divine realities would truly purport revelation, salvation, and atonement in my own experience."

The individuality of the application of law shown in early Massachusetts over the other colonies who claimed the English common law as their birthright, and adopted so much of it as was applicable to existing conditions, is studied in this essay. Here the force of English law was denied, and the present study deals with the period of the first charter, and its independent development as applied to those early times. The author was sometime University Fellow in Constitutional Law of Columbia University. Bibliography (3 p.). Fellow in Constitutional sity. Bibliography (3 p.).

September 10, 1910

The editor is not responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

Publishers should send books promptly for weekly record and descriptive annotation, if possible in advance of publication. The Record of the Publishers' Weekly is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."-LORD BACON.

THE AUSTRALIAN MARKET FOR AMERICAN BOOKS.

STRANGE as it may seem, the English publishing trade is considerably wrought up over the American "invasion" of the Australian market, while many American publishers seem to be unaware-one cannot quite say blissfully unaware—that such a market exists.

For some time English publishers have realized that their Colonial fiction trade has been on a decline; but it is comparatively recently that they have awakened to the fact that the cause is American in its origin.

The reason, as a writer in the (English) Book Monthly points out, is simple. American novel is not particularly better written or intrinsically more interesting than that of the English writer, who, as a matter of fact, had grown accustomed to looking on Australasia quite as a close preserve. But it comes from a comparatively young, very enthusiastic, unconventional and energetic country, and its subject matter is such as will appeal to the people of another country similarly young, enthusiastic, unconventional and energetic.

"Down in Australia," says the same writer, they are driving the road and bridging the ford, and in America they have been doing that all these recent years. Many American novels deal with that particular phase of American life; in fact it is a phase which novelists favor, no doubt because there are such a large number of American readers who favor it. Those readers see here a reflection of the immediate life about them, the life which they understand, the life with and nights, of their waking and sleeping hours. English novelists write of the historic past or, if you like, of the sex problems of the present; but that subject has a less direct appeal to the Australian reader than the other of developing a new tract of country or laying down a new railway. He is busy building Australia, and not unnaturally he turns to books which tell him of the other white man's land between the Atlantic and the Pacific, which is so many stages further ahead in its development than Australia. "This," he says to himself, "is what I want to read about."

It is a fact that American magazines of the Everybody's type have an enormous circulation in Australia and New Zealand; greater, it is understood, than any English magazines enjoy. It is also true that stories of an economic, even socialistic, turn are particularly successful there; and that typically American production, the novel of engineering or business, is sure of a warm Australian welcome.

The market there for American books is indeed already fully as important as the Canadian market, and is growing, if anything, even more rapidly. Those publishers who neglect it are depriving themselves of a very real outlet and eventual asset.

SELLING NOVELS BY PSYCHOLOGY.

Psychology in its possible relation to everything from crime to trade has been discussed pro and con during the past year in the prints. It has been worked literally to an abstract death-abstract, because in almost all of these treatises little of actual relationship has been chronicled. When, therefore, there is divulged the fact of a quite intelligible application of the science to one branch of trade, and when the results of this application have been proved to be dollars and cents, rather than less concrete deductions, a further exposition of the subject takes on less an air of carrying additional scientific coals to an already theoryoverstacked Newcastle.

Not long ago the present writer, says George Jean Nathan, in the current Bookman, in conversation with men interested in the sale of literature on the railway trains, learned that, for some time, the "book butchers" had been making a practical psychological test in conjunction with the dis-position of their wares. To be sure, the word "psychology" is not their word. They call it "human nature"—but, analyzed fun-damentally, the study that the "book butchers" have made of "human nature" is little less than the application of a very interesting form of psychology to their particular element of trade. In other words, the men who sell which they sympathize, the life of their days I novels on the trains are selling many of them by psychology. As to quibbling over the latter word, the reader may decide for himself after he has read the illustrations set down

In the first place, as every train traveller knows, the "book butcher," in the great majority of cases, has very little time in which to dispose of his wares. He must, in short, do the bulk of his selling, if at all, just before the train gets under way. He appears at one end of a car, takes in the situation at a glance, proclaims the fact that he has books for sale, and then, walking slowly down the aisle between the seats, seeks to interest passengers in this or that novel. Obviously-and by way of getting to the point more quicklyhe could not interest the average middleaged masculine passenger in a novel written in the suffragette key any more than he could hope to interest the average woman passenger in, let us say, a baseball novel. The "book butcher" knows this well. He knows, too, that if he makes one misstep, if he offers the wrong sort of novel to the wrong sort of passenger, he has lost a possible customer in that particular passenger, for the trip in point at least. Inversely, the train salesman appreciates the fact that his sales will be commensurate with the special and concrete appeal he can make to the greatest number of persons in the car. And he has about ten minutes, at most, in which to act.

This is the situation. Time and practiceand experience-have brought about the re-The result is selling novels on trains by what would be termed colloquially as "sizing up," but what may be termed, it seems fairly, as psychology. In support of this there is quoted verbatim the statement recently made to the present writer by one of the salesmen: "If it weren't for what may be called psychology just as well as anything else, I suppose," he said, "you can take it for granted a train book butcher wouldn't be able to sell three novels a day. This is the way we work, and I'll talk about my own way so you can get a quick idea of what I mean. When I enter the car I run my eyes slowly over the seats, take in the passengers with a general sweep, eliminate the so-called 'hopeless' ones-those who look too cheap to buy novels-and then, as quickly as I can, group those remaining in my mind's eye. I then start down the aisle. The first passenger I approach, let us say, is a young lady about twenty-two years old, well dressed, who, I have observed, has been apparently looking out of the window, but who, in reality, as I have come to know in the years of my work, has been catching the reflection of her face on the plate glass. Darkness, you know, assisted by interior light, makes the train windows mirror-like. The young lady, then, is slightly vain. And I offer her—not "Little Sister Snow" or "Lords of High Decision" or "The Goose Girl"—but "When a Man Marries."
Why? Because Marries." And, often, she buys it. Because, being sentimentally young and eager to look her best, she buys the novel for its title, knowing nothing about its contents. She figures that the novel has to do with the sort of woman a man loves and marries; she thinks it may contain a helpful suggestion or two by which she can profit, and she wants it. The next passenger is a grumpy middle-aged man. I note that he is looking over the financial page of an evening newspaper very studiously, and, taking advantage of his particular interest at the moment, I lay a Wall Street novel beside him. I do not say a word, but walk on to the next passenger. I know the man will feel the book slide down next to him; I feel sure, when he has studied the quotations he is after, he will look at it; and I know the title will catch his eye-"Samson Rock of Wall Street," or whatever it chances to be. And, by what you may call, thank you, yes—'association of thought,' I sell that man the novel three or four times out of five. The next passenger, let us say, is a young fellow, well dressed and 'collegey. Without psychology, I would probably offer him a novel dealing with athletics—a football story, a baseball or rowing story. You would say that yourself, wouldn't you? But I know better. I have seen him fool with his finger nails, polishing them, and so on. I have caught the general exactness in the part in his hair, of his necktie and well-shined shoes. I give him a novel with a pretty girl on the cover. 'One like her,' I tell him, 'had the seat you're sitting in on yesterday's trip.' He's in love, evidently, and he buys the book. The title? It doesn't matter in the least."

The "book butcher" continued down the

The "book butcher" continued down the aisle in his conversation, pointing out how he approached each passenger and how, in the manner outlined, he tried to insinuate his novels into their pocketbooks. He pointed out that the day of throwing any novel in any seat regardless of the character of book or passenger had passed several years ago, and that, where still practiced, it netted small returns. "The passenger's nature," he said, "must be analyzed before the novel is handed to him. He most often hasn't thought of buying a novel—probably doesn't want one—so you must take advantage of his actions or attitude as you approach him. The man reading the Wall Street edition of the newspaper is an illustration of what I mean."

A man of long experience in the selling of novels on trains has added to what the former "book butcher" said by assuring the present chronicler that the oft-repeated argument that young girls uniformly want sentimental stories and that men want "problem" stories is based on tastes of a bygone day. "A book butcher who goes on that theory, without studying the individuals themselves, would not hold his position for more than a week," he says. "The proposition," explains this second psychological bookseller, "is this: You have a passenger. You have a dozen novels. You have one minute to make a sale -one minnte, because you must divide your short time into small bits among all the passengers. You cannot go at the customer, so to speak, in a slap-bang rush. You must first look the passenger over carefully, 'figure him out,' select the one novel that will make the strongest appeal to him, get that one novel into his hands in the subtlest way you can, and rest on your oars. Seven times out of ten you must argue to yourself in terms of the titles and covers. Always give a young lady in a lavender dress a book with a cover that will harmonize with that dress. has been told often-and it remains true! It almost always works. Do not give middleaged men books with 'Princes' or 'Dukes' in the title. A 'John Marvel' is plain and good enough for them. And, above all things, do not give a homely woman a novel with a feminine American beauty on the cover. She will give it back to you before you can say Jack Robinson. She will not stand for so jarring a reminder of her own deficiency in the way of looks.

"In another line, never 'get on a passenger's nerves' by interrupting him while he is talking or reading a newspaper. Rest content by sliding the novel you want him to buy into the seat beside him. Always try to see the newspaper he is reading. You can frequently get an idea of a man's literary taste by noticing the character of the newspaper he prefers. If you can get a glimpse of the page he is most keenly interested insporting, financial, society, or whatever it may be-you have a hardly beatable point from which to work.

Lack of additional space precludes a further elaboration of the subject. The effort has been made, accordingly, merely to indicate the conscious or unconscious application of what you will grant may be called psychology to the sale of novels on trains by the men whose task it is to sell them.

PROPOSAL TO MAKE COPYRIGHT PERPETUAL.

In a letter to the London Times R. A. Peddie, Acting Librarian of the St. Bride Foundation Technical Library, commenting upon certain points in the proposed English copyright law, makes the novel but interesting suggestion, viz., that copyright should never expire.

"Clause 2 of the Bill provides," he says, "that the term for which copyright shall subsist shall be the life of the author and a period of fifty years after his death. The suggestion I make is that at the expiration of this period the work instead of becoming the prey of any publisher who wishes to issue it, should become Crown property, and that licenses to publish should be granted by the State on payment of certain fees. By this means the public would be spared the unedifying squabbles occurring on the expiration of copyright of important works. A fund would be created which, as well as forming a source of revenue for the State, might in certain instances be used to alleviate cases of destitution among the descendants of wellknown writers

"It is difficult to see any objection to the scheme. There are no vested interests to interfere with, and, as far as the publishers are concerned, I feel sure that they would be glad (even under the most stringent conditions as to cheapness and quality) to take cut a license and retain the right to publish important works of which the ordinary term of copyright has expired. Further, the public would be protected against imperfect or inadequately produced reprints.'

The (English) Publishers' Circular, commenting upon his letter, says: "We are not at all sure that the State will be eager to accept his suggestion that it should stand in loco parentis to the book whose author is dead and whose legal term of copyright has expired, but his arguments are certainly worthy of consideration."

COMMUNICATIONS.

CLARKSON VS. BOOK SUPPLY CO.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly.

IN THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of August 27

the following item was printed:

"Chicago, Ill .-- The Book Supply Company have begun suit in the Circuit Court to enjoin David B. Clarkson from advertising the plaintiff's books for sale in connection with stocks' and 'publishers' over-stocks."

If such suit is pending, I have no knowledge of it. I am not in the habit of listing books as "bankrupt stock" or "publishers' cverstock" unless I buy them as such. This fall and winter I shall advertise and list in approximately half a million mail order catalogues four books published, or formerly published by The Book Supply Company. In this advertising these books will be listed as follows: "An Uncrowned King," 54 c.; "The Calling of Dan Matthews," 85 c.; "The Shepherd of the Hills," 38 c.; "That Printer of Udell's," 38 c.

The above four books are not "bankrupt stock" or "overstock."

In justice to me I will ask you to print the above statement in your next issue. DAVID B. CLARKSON.

THE TRADE BOOK LIST.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: In his article on "Dividing the Advertising Appropriation," in your issue of August 27, the writer who signs himself "An Outsider" makes some statements regarding the "Trade Book List" which we cannot allow to go unchallenged. The "Trade Book List" is not "on the same principle" as the lately-established medium in the same fold. lately-established medium in the same field which he mentions; it is on a principle which was formulated in the first issue of the "Trade Book List" fifteen years ago, and which has been more or less imitated by every competitor since. Instead of the "Trade Book List" being "even cheaper for the dealer," it costs from 331/3 per cent. to 175 per cent. more (according to the quantity used) than the medium he mentions; notwithstanding which additional cost, it is used far more generally by the retail booktrade than any other imprint medium. After making these two mis-statements, the "Outsider" proceeds to constitute himself spekesman for the three classes of "buying public," "retailer" and "advertiser"—all of whom, he "imagines," prefer another medium than the "Trade Book List."

Before accepting such a judgment would it not be well to know upon what authority or information it is based—who, in fact, "An Outsider" is. Affidavits as to the "Trade Book List's" circulation and advertising patronage, or any other information regarding the publication, are available to all who may be entitled to them. We believe that the buying public, the retailer and the advertiser will consider these more pertinent and valuable than anything "An Outsider" may "imagine" regarding our publication.

PUBLISHERS THE TRADE BOOK LIST. CHICAGO, September 5, 1910.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Major J. Monroe Taylor, author of a number of books on dogs and considered a national authority on that subject, died in Rutherford, N. J., last week. He was born in Lexington, Ky., in 1838, and served in the Civil War. He was the first president of the American Kennel Club, and figured prominently as a judge in every important dog show held in this country.

WILLIAM HOLMAN-HUNT, O.M., the painter who, with Rossetti and Millais, founded the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, died Wednesday. He was born in London in 1827, and exhibited his first picture at the Royal Academy in 1846. He had been in feeble health for some time, and his death was not unexpected. His youth and artistic apprenticeship was one of poverty and struggle, but after his "Light of the World" his fame and success grew rapidly and continuously. He never became an Academician, but a few years ago received a much higher honor—he was made one of the original members of the Order of Merit.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

THE San Francisco Sun, a new Democratic daily, made its first appearance last week.

The Boston Daily Post is advertising an average circulation of over 350,000 copies, which it says "exceeds by a wide margin the circulation of any other morning newspaper in the country, with one exception, the New York World."

New York City is to have a new daily newspaper, the New York Review, a weekly, becoming a daily October 1. It is a theatrical and sporting paper, in direct competition with the Morning Telegraph. The latter paper is the champion of the Klaw & Erlanger interests, while the Review is "independent."

The Delincator celebrates its fortieth anniversary, its announcement of which reads as follows: "The celebration begins in October, the Fashion Number par excellence; grows bigger in November, the Fortieth Anniversary; stays big in December, the old-time Christmas jollification, and.....in 1911—twelve great Anniversary Numbers."

On account of what are said to be political differences, a split occurred in the official family of the Success Magazine last week, and caused the loss of David G. Evans, vice-president and treasurer of the company, and Samuel Merwin, one of its editors. The cause of the action is said to rest solely in the determination of controlling forces of the publication to change its political policy, and support the "regular" faction in Congress and the anti-Roosevelt forces in New York State, although this is vigorously denied by other officers of the company.

Between 5500 and 6000 daily newspapers are published in the entire world, over 900 of them credited to Germany, 250 to Great Britain, while Paris alone has 150—more than London, New York, Philadelphia and Boston added together. Le Petit Journal of Paris has the largest circulation in the world; but the native dialect papers of India are read by the most people, because they are circulated until completely worn out. The Post-Zeitung, of Frankfort, Germany, is the oldest newspaper in Europe; but in China the Kin Pan is a thousand years old, and the Tsing Pao, or Peking News, is the oldest newspaper in the world, having come out regularly for nearly 1400 years. Its circulation is about 10,000.

PERSONAL NOTE.

Manzi, Joyant & Co. regret to announce that owing to ill health L. Dion has felt it necessary to resign the management of their business in the United States and Canada, and take pleasure in informing the trade of the appointment of G. H. Clarke as manager.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE Chamber of Deputies, Buenos Ayres, has passed a copyright bill giving protection to literature and works of art.

KATHARINE TYNAN'S new novel, "Freda," the story of a young orphan, will be published by Cassell & Company on September 9.

Overheard by our special correspondent in the main parlor of the Hotel Royal Victoria, Larchmont Manor: "D'ja know they got Chantyclear out in French a'ready?"

HARPER & BROTHERS announce the publication this week of four books: "The Heritage of the Desert," by Zane Grey; "My Mark Twain," by W. D. Howells; "Round the Year with the Stars," by Garrett P. Serviss; "Elba and Elsewhere," by Don C. Seitz.

Reilly & Britton Company make another report on the phenomenal record of popularity of "Miss Minerva and William Green Hill." This is that after publishing the eighth edition of the book on September 1, it was necessary to order the ninth on September 4.

Some idea of Charles Zueblin's sententiousness may be had from this sentence which appears in his forthcoming book, "Democracy and the Overman" (B. W. Huebsch):

"Mr. Taft is the apostle of the obvious, Mr. Bryan is the prophet of the dubious."

GEORGE W. JACOBS & COMPANY have just ready a gift-book compiled by Ina Russelle Warren and called "A Book of Friendship." It is a collection of verse and poetry taken from ancient and modern writers. The pages are decorated in brown and the book is bound in brown boards with an artistic inset on the front cover.

On September 2 John Lane Company will publish a new book by Elizabeth Godfrey, "The Cradle of a Poet." This delineation of the life struggle of a young man of poetic temperament, who is compelled to give up his plans for a career as a poet because of his duty to his father, is of compelling interest. Noel Harmon, the poet, is not an unpractical dreamer, but a practical idealist. In the end he achieves his desire, and the hand in marriage of a girl he had always loved, but despaired of winning.

THE NEW YORK EVENING POST JOB PRINTING OFFICE is getting out "Hearts Atour," a merry novel by Edith Chetwood and Edward P. Thompson, the successful author of books on mechanical engineering. The first author is one of the Colonial Dames of America. The book will be out next Saturday, and booksellers ordering now will have liberal discount.

THE remarkable success of "The New Word," by Allen Upward, which has been one of the leading non-fiction best-sellers of the year, lends special interest to the announcement by Mitchell Kennerley that he will publish immediately "Lord Alistair's Rebellion," a novel by this writer. Needless to say, Mr. Upward's book will not be of the usual type, and we are led to expect a novel of extraordinary fascination and distinction.

OPEN COURT PUBLISHING COMPANY have just ready the second edition of "Letters to His Holiness Pope Pius x.," by a Modernist, an American whose life has been devoted to the study of Catholicism, who here endeavors to prove that the present Catholic Church is not Catholic, but Italian, and even Roman, and that few non-Italians are tolerated among the hierarchy of the Catholic Church

GINN & Co. have just published "A Complete Grammar of Esperanto," by Ivy Kellerman, A.M., Ph.D., which appears at a time when Esperanto is more than ever a subject of international interest on account of the Sixth International Congress recently held in Washington. This book may be recognized as the standard grammar of this international language, as it is the first to treat the subject in a manner comparable to the grammars of French, Spanish or German.

There will be a new Brownie book from Palmer Cox this fall; and Ralph Henry Barbour's new foot-ball story, "Kingsford, Quarter," will be published September 24. Other juvenile books on the Century Co.'s fall lists are a new "Betty" book by Carolyn Wells, a new "Lakerim" book by Rupert Hughes, "The League of the Signet-Ring" by Mary Constance DuBois, "The Young Rail-roaders" by F. Lovell Coombs, and a nonsense picture book with cover in color by De Witt Clinton Falls.

THE Lippincotts do not begin their regular fall publication season until about September 15, but in the meantime there is no cessation in their activity in the issue of medical and other technical and professional works. They only recently brought out "Lippincott's New Medical Dictionary," an elaborate and entirely new work, under the editorship of Dr. Henry W. Cattell; the "Globe English-French Pocket Dictionary," an orginal compilation in convenient form, the work of Arthur F. Wood, a British barrister, and a treatise on "Electro-Metallurgy," by Walter G. McMillan.

Among the September publications of George H. Doran Company may be noted: "'Where's Master,' by Cæsar, the King's Dog," a short story that has created a great stir in England and has had numerous evidences of approval from the royal family, although its authorship is anonymous; "Derby Day in the Yukon, and Other Songs of the Northland," a striking book of Yukon verse; "How Do I Love Thee," an anthology of love verse by Clara E. Laughlin; "In the Master's Country," a geographical aid to the study of the life of Christ by Martha Tarbell, Ph.D.; and a new edition of "Robinson Crusoe," superbly illustrated in color by Roger Pocock.

D. APPLETON & COMPANY will publish on September 9, "Race Distinctions in American Law," by Gilbert T. Stephenson, the result of a careful study of much important legal data bearing upon race distinction. Such subjects as Jim Crow Legislation, Separation of Schools, Theatres, Restaurants and Hotels, the Suffrage Distinctions, Civil Rights, have been thoroughly discussed with many references to authorities. Also, "The Story of Sugar," by G. T. Surface, Instructor in Yale University, which gives, for the average reader, the history of a commodity of commerce on which, excepting the technical and trade literature, very little has been written.

Scribners publish this month two picture books of the first importance—Henry Hutt's "Girls" and Harrison Fisher's "Pictures in Color." The latter is made up of sixteen cartoons, all in color, including many new pictures and showing Mr. Fisher's brilliant and sparkling drawing at its best. The pictures include "The American Girl in Italy, Holland, France, Japan, Ireland and England." a series which first appeared in the Ladies' Home Journal, and such pictures as "Rivals," "Which?" "The Modern Eve," "Taking Toll," etc. "Girls" contains thirty-two drawings of girls by Mr. Hutt which have never before been reproduced in any form and which represent his best work, sixteen in full colors and sixteen in pen and ink.

"When is the best time of the year to buy books?" was the question asked, according to the Boston Transcript, of the man who presides over a second-hand book stall 9 by a regular customer. "Well," replied the seller, "the best time of the year to buy and the time of the greatest opportunity to pick up bargains is right now. Why? Well, strange as it may seem, there are a lot of folks in this big city who sell their books in the summer time to get the money for a trip out of town, a week's vacation, and sometimes because their business stagnates with the coming of hot weather and they need the money. Most of them are the kind of people who never think of the pawnshops. That's a sort of disgrace with them. But they have books that they have read picking out a lot of them and bringing them It's cash for them, and as for me, my stock is always best and there is the choicest picking about this season."

LITTLE, BROWN & COMPANY have added the following books to their already long list of fall publications: "The Quests of Paul Beck," by McDonnell Bodkin, tells the remarkable exploits of an invincible detective; "Sally Ann's Experience," by Eliza Calvert Hall, is the separate publication in gift book form of one of the stories told in "Aunt Jane of Kentucky;" "Susan Clegg and Her Friend Mrs. Lathrop" and "Susan Clegg and Her Neighbor's Affairs," by Anne Warner, have been combined under the title "Susan Clegg, Her Friend and Her Neighbors." The Little People Everywhere Series has four new titles added to it: "Gerda in Sweden," "Fritz in Germany," "Boris in Russia" and "Betty in Canada," all by Mrs. E. B. McDonald and Julia Dalrymple. Also for children is the "Louisa Alcott Story Book," compiled by Fanny E. Coe. Prentiss Cummings has translated into hexameter verse "The Iliad of Homer," which this firm issues in two volumes. They have ready also new editions of "The Rise of the Republic of the United States," by Richard Frothingham, and "Starting in Life," by Nathaniel C. Fowler, Jr.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Denver, Col.—H. E. Thomas, bookseller and stationer, has sold out to the Fisher Book & Stationery Company.

DURHAM, N. C.—A receiver has been appointed for the Henry J. Smith Co., booksellers and stationers.

Erie, Pa.—W. J. Sell has purchased A. C. Derry's news and book store on Peach Street.

EVERETT, WASH.—Percy Dearle & Co. is the name of a new corporation which will specialize in books and handle in addition Spalding's athletic goods and Keuffel & Esser's engineering supplies. Percy Dearle, president and manager of the corporation, is also manager of the student's co-operative bookstore at the Washington State University, and with him are associated Verne Fitch, former editor of the university daily and Arthur Brown, another university man.

Kansas City. Mo.—E. E. Hahn, recently buyer for the book and stationery department of the Jones Dry Goods Co., has gone into business for himself, as Hahn's Bookstore, at 419 East 11th Street, in the building occupied by the Western Dental College. He will carry a line of fine stationery, school books, medical books and rare and fine editions. He also publishes Rush's "Constitution of the United States in Outline," and plans a series of practical farming booklets. Mr. Hahn, from long association, is well known in the trade. His apprenticeship began in 1884 with Moore Bros. & Co., and later with M. H. Dickerson & Co., then the leading bookstore in Kansas City. In 1893 he took a position with the McClurg Co. at Chicago, remaining six years, afterward going back to Kansas City with Bryant & Douglass, with whom he remained five years.

Marietta, O.—The store in the Wittlig Building, on Front Street, formerly occupied by the Colonial Bookstore, has been leased by Kiger and Robe, of Huntington and Columbus, respectively, who opened an up-to-date-bookstore there September 1.

St. Louis, Mo.—A plan is on foot to reorganize the B. T. Jett Book and News Co., dealers in stationery, who recently went into bankruptcy, with liabilities of $30,766.11 and assets of $16,164.79. All bills incurred since July I last, it is said, will be paid in full and a satisfactory settlement arranged for previous indebtedness, with no preferred creditors.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—William J. Getty, one of the old timers in the book and stationery business in San Francisco, is now at home in his new office in the Sheldon Building, on Market Street, where he has a line of samples, including Bibles.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Chronicle Bookstore, located on Market Street, in the Chronicle Building, has been closing out its stock, offering all books on hand at decided bargains.

VENICE, CAL.—A. L. McKelvey, bookseller and stationer, has made an assignment.

PICK-UPS.

University News.—"How can you tell a Yale man from a Harvard man?"

"Well, a Yale man always acts as if he owned the world."

"Yes?"

"And a Harvard man always acts as if he doesn't know what vulgar person owns the world, and, furthermore, he doesn't care to know."—Cleveland Leader.

PERFECTLY EASY.—"You say you sold that fool story which you were telling me the other day?"

"Yes. I got $10 for it."

"What publication was silly enough to give you money for that yarn? It was an old one, to begin with, and the point was so far fetched that it lost whatever merit it might otherwise have had."

"I know; but I wrote an introduction to it saying it was 'one of the clever little stories told by the late Justice Brewer."—Chicago-Record-Herald.

Wouldn't it Exasperate You?

WITH APOLOGIES TO MR. GUS MAGER OF THE AMERICAN

WOULDN'T IT EXASPERATE YOU if you were a young but well-meaning publisher, and you had built up quite a list of successful books and were doing pretty well with them, and if some of these books were the famous

LITTLE COUSIN SERIES

now forty titles, teaching the geography and history, manners and customs, etc., of the different countries to American children in the guise of nice stories, and another larger and older publishing house came along and looked enviously at your nice little list of books,—and proceeded practically to duplicate it; or, as the phrase usually is in the book world—" pirate" it?

And when you expostulated with this other publishing house if they told you "don't mind, young fellow. We are doing all right, and if we hadn't done it, somebody else would." And when you asked for details you were told: "Why, the author is going to write the books any way, and would have published them thru So and So of New York if we hadn't taken them."

And not only that, but on further inquiry you found that the author who was going to take the books to the New York publishing house was an employee—or her husband was—in the educational department of the big, old publisher who took your nice little books?

And not only that, but this good, big publisher was the very publisher of all in the country who put up the greatest "bellow" when another publisher—a Philadelphia publisher, this time—took some of his nice books a few years ago?

However, the moral is, and that is what will really interest the BOOKSELI.ERS and LIBRARIANS everywhere, that from and after this date, for another year at least, we will sell all copies of the following four titles of the LITTLE COUSIN SERIES (Trade Mark)

OUR LITTLE GERMAN COUSIN OUR LITTLE RUSSIAN COUSIN OUR LITTLE SWEDISH COUSIN OUR LITTLE CANADIAN COUSIN

AT ONE-HALF OF THE REGULAR WHOLESALE PRICE, as well as continue to sell the following four titles:

OUR LITTLE IRISH COUSIN
OUR LITTLE ITALIAN COUSIN
OUR LITTLE JAPANESE COUSIN
OUR LITTLE MEXICAN COUSIN

at the same half rates as already advertised. Later we may perhaps be able to offer additional titles at half rates, but for the present THIRTY-TWO of the famous LITTLE COUSIN SERIES are selling at the regular price, and eight—as above—at HALF rates.

Letters to His Holiness Pope Pius X

By a MODERNIST

I F you would know what the world of to-day is asking and imploring of the Papacy and Catholicism; if you would understand a movement which portends greater consequences for your religion than any since the Reformation, read the book written by an American whose life has been given to the study of Catholicism.

The present Catholic Church is not Catholic but is Italian and even Roman. Its first principle is that only an Italian can become Pope, and among the Cardinals few. non-Italians are tolerated in order to keep balance of power in Italy.
